Our aim was to demonstrate that measuring a carbon footprint and taking steps to reduce it, can provide benefits beyond purely environmental ones, for example, in terms of employee engagement, customer sentiment and cost savings.

Our event was delivered by Anthesis, a specialist consultancy which focuses on delivering sustainable performance. They summarised how to measure the footprint, the data required to do so and the common challenges faced during the process.

The interactive session included breakouts, grouped by nature of business or end market, to discuss the challenges businesses face with carbon emissions reduction and reporting, as well as the benefits being captured.

Attendees appreciated the combination of expert-led content and the opportunity to engage with other companies across the 3i portfolio.

We will follow this roundtable with additional sustainability focused events, and introductions, as well as specific company next steps around carbon emissions and overall sustainability strategies.
